

ABOUT THE COURSE

Activities of occupational safety and health directly concern the safety, physical and mental health of everybody. Therefore, it is an acceptable fact that better safety and health is the key to meeting worker increasing demands for a better life. This in turn motivates workers to a new level, thereby improving the quality and production levels. Decreased cost of accidents further improves the top line. It is important to impart safety and health knowledge not only to new employees but equally important for the "old hand" Employees who have been around for a while do tend to become complacent about safety at work even when faced by hazards that can kill.

By demonstrating the concern for safety, the management can foster greater company loyalty and boost employee morale. And, because fewer accidents happen, fewer days are taken off work and the company stands to benefit from a far more complete and productive workforce.

This training course is specially designed to include a wide range to topics to meet requirements of most industries whether these are Engineering, Chemical, Pharmaceutical, Petroleum or other manufacturing units in the region.

The course will enhance safety knowledge and result in improved safety behavior of the employees. The course will be participatory and interactive to be supplemented by Safety films.
